

Joint work with David McCarthy

TITLE: Steps Toward a New Foundation for Comparative Confidence

ABSTRACT. In this paper, we show how to generalize the arguments of de Finetti and Joyce (for probabilism as a coherence requirement for numerical credences) to the case of comparative confidence relations. Our framework leads to new, direct (and epistemic) justifications of the basic (viz., universally accepted) principles of comparative belief.